Re: A-3999 (Giblin; Burzichelli; Murphy; Downey) Concerns Employment Benefits and Coronavirus Disease 2019 Infections Contracted by Essential Employees

On behalf of the Business Coalition, we write to you with concern about Assembly Bill No. 3999 (Giblin; Burzichelli; Murphy; Downey) which would create a rebuttable presumption, for workers' compensation insurance purposes, that certain essential employees contracted the virus during the scope of their employment. The business community is appreciative of the need to ensure that our front-line workers who have contracted COVID-19, and who have been negatively affected, receive the benefits that they need to make them whole.

Our primary concerns are that the cost of these claims can overwhelm the system, which was not designed to handle claims during a worldwide pandemic, and that the costs will be pushed back onto the business community, which is also struggling to survive. Workers' compensation benefits are, by law, an injured worker's exclusive remedy for workplace injuries. Therefore, this legislation will only serve to shift the cost of the pandemic response to New Jersey's workers' compensation system and the essential businesses paying premiums for this insurance. No new short-term financial benefits will be provided under this legislation. In fact, it may create barriers to workers needing immediate assistance.

To support our position we've attached several documents which explains: a) the availability of federal Pandemic Unemployment Assistance (PUA) funding for employees who are unable to work due to COVID-19 related reasons, but who nevertheless remain employed, and b) that those PUA payments would be reduced by the amount the employee received from workers' compensation, as well as a Q&A.

We have confirmed the U.S. Department of Labor's interpretation on both of these points. They are working on updating their guidance to clarify that the CARES Act provides benefits under the PUA program to employees who are not able to work for COVID-19 related reasons, even if they remain employed.

COVID-19 medical costs are also addressed by recent federal legislation. The new Health and Human Services portal is now covering any expenses for COVID-19 testing and treatment for anyone who lacks health insurance coverage. Healthcare providers treating uninsured patients can submit their expenses here to receive reimbursement. Providing the exclusive remedy of workers' compensation would only serve to shift these costs to New Jersey employers, effectively leaving federal dollars on the table. To the extent there were gaps in health insurance coverage for front-line retail employees, the federal government has taken that on.

Because existing federal programs are already addressing the immediate needs of workers, we believe now is not the time to enact a program that would displace otherwise available federal dollars. This is especially true given the fact that Congress is currently negotiating an additional worker benefit package.

Nevertheless, if legislators choose to move a bill now, despite the availability of federal funding that may be lost, please be aware that we also have particular concerns about some specific provisions in the legislation, including but not limited to the following:

Definition of Essential Employee: An “essential employee” is not clearly defined and is overly broad.

Theory of Exposure: A claimant should have some credible reason to believe the exposure occurred at work. Data coming out of a New York study suggests lower infection rate for some front-line workers than the public at large – perhaps due to better protective equipment and safety protocols. Additional reports are showing that workers who take necessary precautions, such as wearing masks, are not spreading the virus. For the presumption of causation to make sense, there should be some basis for it. Close interaction with customers and no known exposure in any other context would suffice to establish the presumption, but the claimant should have some articulable basis.

Duration of Rebuttable Presumption: As the stay-at-home order was loosened and eventually rescinded by a subsequent executive order, permitting significantly more opportunities to interact with other people outside of the home, the basis for the presumption is significantly weaker. Therefore, the presumption should only apply to that period of time when an employee was required to work and had very little other exposures. This period should be defined as the start of the stay-at-home order to its rescission.
