Branding Yourself
In a crowded professional landscape, developing a personal brand that stands out is essential for setting yourself apart from the crowd. Mentorship Culture: Starting A Successful Mentoring Program
HR leadership teams have had to contend with an increasingly challenging environment the past three years – all while striving to improve workplace culture, attract and retain talent, and provide professional development opportunities for employees at all organizational levels. Well-designed and managed mentorship programs can have a dramatic impact on workplace culture, people engagement, and retention. Starting a mentorship program isn’t rocket science, however, there’s certainly an art to it.

Imposter Syndrome
While not an exclusive female phenomenon, imposter syndrome is something many women struggle with. Doubting our skills, talents and accomplishments, coupled with the internalized fear of being exposed, creates very real anxiety and agitation. Attend this panel discussion to learn how to combat those feelings, and work toward overcoming them.

Is Confidence a Dirty Word?
Some women exhibit a high level of confidence, and can be labeled difficult, or worse. Others hold back their confidence for fear it will be misunderstood. This can be particularly true for military veterans, or those re-entering the workforce after a break in their career. Attend this panel to hear strategies for striking the right balance, understanding when to throw out the rule book and walk in, and when to own your power.

INSPIRING!

Great women empowerment sessions

Very well organized

Found the speakers very entertaining & motivational.

It was amazing to connect with so many powerful and wonderful women.

Diverse, experienced, & inspirational set of (TED Talks) speakers.

I did relate to the common theme sewn through which was “you can do it, do not short change your potential, believe in yourself!”

Truly amazing.

Powerful Breakout Rooms!

The speakers were insightful and the sessions offered a wide range of interesting and relevant topics to women business leaders in NJ.
