Dear New Jersey Legislature,

We are a coalition of businesses and associations that represent job creators in New Jersey and are fighting for a fair, predictable, and balanced environment in which to do business and grow the economy for the betterment of all our citizens. We ask that you oppose the so-called “Climate Superfund Act” (S3545/A4696). We welcome a dialogue to address the real resiliency needs of our state and to create complementary alternative energy sources.

This letter will address four main reasons why this bill should not move forward: affordability, impact to jobs and the economy, unfairness, and the poor message it sends to the business community that complying with the law can nonetheless result in substantial liabilities.

1. Affordability – This bill is predicted to cost NJ households an additional $1,000 per year over the next nine years.

Advocates have made the fanciful claim that the costs imposed on fossil fuel companies will not be passed on to consumers. This claim is patently false. While we do not know how much the State Treasurer may seek to assess under this bill, one of the prime sponsors believes the amount will be $40 billion. At that number, an analysis by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce places the per household consumer costs at over $1,000 per year for the next nine years with a total cost of over $9,000, which will exacerbate the affordability crisis we are already in.

2. Impact on Jobs and the Economy – This bill puts jobs at risk across the entire state.

New Jersey is home to only two refineries. In North Jersey, the Phillips 66 plant in Linden and in South Jersey, the Paulsboro Refining Company in Paulsboro, NJ. These two New Jersey refineries alone, contribute $8.4 billion to the national economy, pay $1.4 billion in state and local taxes, pay $4 billion in labor income, and support 35,700 jobs in the state. New Jerseyans annually consume 3.5 billion gallons of gasoline, 1.1 billion gallons of diesel and home heating oil, and 806 million gallons of jet fuel, all products that are produced right here in the Garden State. The economic significance of the Bayway Industrial Complex is detailed in the recently released Economic Impact Analysis. Passage of this bill would put those jobs in jeopardy and harm the state and regional economy. Predicting that this bill would harm our two remaining refineries is not fear mongering. The East Coast used to be the home to about 14 refineries - we now have four left, with two in New Jersey. The threat to these refineries from this bill is real.

3. Unfairness - It is fundamentally unfair to impose a retroactive assessment against companies that provide a legal product that remains necessary for our national security, the health of our state's economy and to accommodate our modern lifestyle. We will need to rely on fossil fuels for decades to come. Furthermore, it is unjust that the bill only imposes these charges against companies that refine or extract fossil fuels but not on the businesses and consumers who use these products and create the emissions. The bill also ignores the trickle-down effect that it will have on the vast number of smaller companies in New Jersey, who engage in the exact same activities and on the consumers of those fuels.
4. Sending the Wrong Message to the Business Community - The business community should not be penalized for providing a legal and necessary product that is the foundation of our economic and societal well-being.

This legislation sends the wrong message to the business community and does nothing to address climate change. It tells businesses that if you provide a legal, essential product, you could be open to enormous penalties. This legislation is also clearly unconstitutional as many courts in other states have found that the issues of how to address climate change need to be addressed at the national and international levels, not by an individual state. New Jersey contributes just 1.7% of the United States' GHG emissions and only 0.3% of worldwide emissions. Yet, this bill seeks to hold companies that do business in New Jersey liable for a company's worldwide activities.

Given the costs being imposed on consumers during an affordability crisis, the harmful impact of this legislation on two major job creators in this state, the unfairness of retroactive liability, and the negative message it sends to the business community, we ask that you not support this legislation. We welcome an opportunity to discuss this with you in greater detail.

Sincerely,
